

A Prayer of Devotion

The Way Slain and Living

Epistle to the Hebrews
Chapter Ten · Verse Twenty

THE VERSE · KING JAMES VERSION

By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;

BLOOMED RENDERING · THE PRAYER FORM

He inaugurated a way for us — dedicated new, as a temple is dedicated — a way freshly-slain, and living still.

Through the curtain we enter,
and the curtain is his flesh.

So the tearing was the opening:
veil and body torn as one, top to bottom,
and the way into the Holiest stands open — slaughter-fresh, and alive.

THE GREEK SOURCE · TEXTUS RECEPTUS

ἦν ἐνεκαίνισεν ἡμῖν ὁδὸν πρόσφατον καὶ ζῶσαν διὰ τοῦ καταπετάσματος, τοῦτ' ἔστιν τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ

hēn enekainisen hēmin hodon prosphaton kai zōsan dia tou katapetasmatos, tout' estin tēs sarkos autou

SOURCE RECOVERY · SEVEN CATCHES

ἐνεκαίνισεν · enekainisen

he inaugurated-as-new — the temple-dedication verb of 1 Maccabees, same root as enkainia, the Feast of Dedication whose courts Jesus walked in John 10. From kainos: new in kind, not merely new in time. The way is not refurbished; it is dedicated as a new temple.

ὁδὸν πρόσφατον · hodon prosphaton

a way freshly-slaughtered — pros + phonos, slaughter. The primary classical sense is freshly-killed; “recent” is only the worn extension. The slaughter is not what blocked the road; the slaughter is the paving.

ζῶσαν · zōsan

living — present active participle, held in the same breath as the slaughter. Slain-and-living as one way: the paradox is not resolved, it is walked.

καταπετάσματος · katapetasmatos

the curtain — kata + petannumi, the thing-spread-down: the temple veil sealing the Holy of Holies, torn from top to bottom at the crucifixion.

τοῦτ’ ἔστιν τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ · tout’ estin tēs sarkos autou that is, his flesh — the identification clause, unambiguous in the Greek and softened in English: the curtain IS the flesh. One substance, one tearing, one opening.

σάρξ · sarx

the flesh — the ring grown since the sweep: in Galatians 5:13 our sarx is the aphormē, the foothold self-will attacks from; here his sarx is the doorway itself. Same word, inverted by its owner — the battleground in us, the gate in him.

διὰ · dia

through — with the genitive: through the curtain, not around it. There is no bypass of the veil, no path that skirts the tearing. Access is through, or it is not at all.

THE RECOVERY

The English new and living way keeps the comfort and loses the blood —

*— prosphaton as freshly-slain, not merely new

*— the curtain and the flesh identified as one substance

*— sarx inverted: the battleground of Galatians become the doorway

*— dia as through-the-tearing, never around it

The verse says the unsayable in a subordinate clause: the curtain that kept God unapproachable and the body of the Anointed are the same fabric — and the tearing of one was the opening of both.

RESONANCES

Matthew 27:51

The veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom — torn from God’s side downward, at the hour the flesh tore.

Hebrews 12:14

Without holiness, no man shall see the Lord — the same epistle’s other gift: chapter ten opens the way in; chapter twelve names the eyes.

Galatians 5:13

Use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh — the aphormē, the foothold. Our sarx the battlefield; his sarx the gate.

Revelation 5:6

A Lamb as it had been slain — hōs esphagmenon, slain-and-standing: the same paradox prosphaton kai zōsan holds in two words.

PRACTITIONER'S RESPONSE · A PRAYER TO SAY

Bring me in by the way You opened — not around the tearing, but through it.
Where the curtain was, Your flesh is;
where Your flesh tore, the Holiest stands open — lead me in.
